

Our next social outing is to visit the Old Town Model Railroad Depot located at 2415 San Diego Avenue, Suite 107, San Diego 92110. This is not to be confused with the model railroad museum in Balboa Park. At the Old Town Model RR, you step back into the 1950s and you will relive some of the good old days. This model RR layout covers 2500 square feet and is a lot more than trains. It is really a re-enactment of life in the 1950s-- full of buildings, signage, cars, a nighttime baseball game, and even a drive-in with car hops on roller skates. The scenes have sounds and voices that makes it all come alive. This is really a fun place to visit for everyone. Admission is free but donations are happily accepted to help cover the rent.

After our visit, we will go across the street to Miguel's Cocina for a delightful Mexican lunch.
